

Gajen Sunthara

Gajen Sunthara is the Director of Innovation R&D at Boston Children's Hospital and is the founder of 1upHealth, which is a platform for patients, providers, and software developers to aggregate and share medical data. He also holds a Senior Advisor role at InciteHealth at the Center for Primary Care at Harvard Medical School.

Prior to Boston Children's Hospital, Mr. Sunthara helped tech-architect President Obama's Precision Medicine Initiative at the White House, worked at The United States Digital Service and served as a Presidential Innovation Fellow at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services/Office of the National Coordinator for Health IT. While in both public service roles, he worked with multiple government agencies including the U.S. Department of Defense, Veteran Affairs, and the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services on the national healthcare information exchange.

Mr. Sunthara has a Bachelors in Computer Science from Wentworth Institute of Technology and a M.S. in Information Technology from Harvard University.