

Kelly Cronin, Director, Interoperability for Health Care Transformation

Kelly Cronin serves as the Director of Interoperability for Health Care Transformation at the Office of the National Coordinator for Health Information Technology (ONC). In this role, she coordinates policies to create and sustain a more connected, value-based health care system.

Ms. Cronin was the first staff person in ONC and has held a variety of leadership positions since its inception. She's also been an advisor to the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) administrator and supported the establishment of the accountable care and learning and diffusion portfolios in Capability Maturity Model Integration.

Prior to her time at the U.S. Health & Human Services, Ms. Cronin worked as director at the Lewin Group where she managed health services research projects in the medical technology practice group.

Ms. Cronin has a Master's degree in public health and a Master's degree in health policy from George Washington University.
